The burden of disease has shifted from communicable to chronic. Public health and health care are responding, but are we working together?

Please join us for a conversation on how we can collectively advance the health of Kansans. Ralph I. Canuteson Memorial Lectureship keynote speaker, Karen DeSalvo, former Assistant Secretary for Health and national expert in Public Health 3.0 will describe how public health is changing in response to different demands.

Additional breakout discussions will explore how to expand data sharing for effective population-level health improvement; the state of accreditation in Kansas; and the role of multi-sector collaborations.

This summit is offered at no cost through support from the following sponsors:

- ▶ University of Kansas Medical Center
- ▶ The University of Kansas Center for Community Health and Development
- ▶ Lawrence-Douglas County Health Department
- ▶ Kresge Foundation
